Letter From The Editor

Dear Friend and Partner in Mission!

As I hear from our missionaries abroad about the suffering endured by the children and families they serve each day, I've become increasingly concerned about the hardships experienced by our very own supporters – caring friends like you who make our lifesaving work possible.

Sadly, many of our loyal donors are now experiencing their own financial challenges that have affected their ability to give to Salesian Missions. In just the past few years, the number of gifts we receive each year has dropped by nearly 40%. Other humanitarian organizations are struggling as well, and it breaks my heart to think of all the desperate people around the world who may be affected.

Although I often worry about the future, I'm inspired by my faith in God and the determination of our dedicated supporters. In the past, during times of financial crisis, those of our donors who had the ability stepped up and filled the void of those unable to give as much.

With you by our side, we will overcome the challenges we face and will continue to bring comfort, opportunity and hope to our suffering brothers and sisters in most need.

Throughout this issue of SALESIAN, you will see examples of just how much your generosity and kindness make a profound impact. I hope you share in our joy in these accomplishments and accept our sincere appreciation for being a cherished member of our Salesian family.

All God's blessings now and always,

Fr. Michael Conway, S.D.B.

P.S. This issue of SALESIAN will bring to light several ways for you to demonstrate your continued support. Whether it's a gift that will be multiplied 14 times, building a chapel in someone's honor, or including Salesian Missions in your estate plans, your generosity makes a lifesaving difference. Thank you!

Please know that throughout the year, Masses will be offered for you and our other partners in mission at the Basilica of Jesus the Adolescent in Bethlehem as well as here at our Salesian Missions Chapel.

The people of Cambodia are enduring hardships no one should have to face in a lifetime. Thousands of civilians have been forced to flee and take shelter as their homes and communities have been ravaged by airstrikes and artillery fire at the Thai border. Children, families, and the elderly have all been deeply impacted, with an estimated 500,000 people displaced across the country.

As the country faces one of the most significant conflict escalations in recent years, students of the Don Bosco Educational Center in Poipet have been directly affected as their school has been forced to halt operations indefinitely.

Since 2005, Don Bosco Poipet has provided much-needed education and vocational training to poor, disadvantaged, and at-risk children. These children are in dire need of support—perhaps now more than ever—as both their education and homes are under threat.

Despite the school's closure, the Salesians in the region have remained steadfast in their mission, continuing their work on the ground in Cambodia and providing essential support to those in need.

“We are proud of the work that the Salesians in Cambodia are doing to provide care and resources to families whose lives have been uprooted and deeply impacted by this crisis,” says Father Michael Conway, Director of Salesian Missions. “Our missionaries continue to demonstrate unwavering compassion and resilience as they deliver critical aid to those affected.”

“This work would not be possible without the continued generosity of our supporters who understand the urgency of this crisis and the importance of standing with these families in their time of need,” Fr. Mike continues. “When victims of humanitarian crises receive sustained support, it not only meets their immediate needs but also restores hope and stability for the future.”

Delivering Essential Aid and Resources

The Salesians witnessed the devastating impact of the conflict firsthand as they visited refugee camps and temporary shelters in Siem Reap and Uddar Meanchey provinces. During these visits, missionaries met with the families of students and staff; distributing food, household supplies, and hygiene materials. The children were also given small treats—simple gestures meant to bring moments of comfort, joy, and a sense of normalcy in the midst of crisis.

For many families, these camps have become their only refuge—crowded, uncertain spaces where access to clean water, food, and medical care remains limited. Families are doing everything they can to protect their children while navigating the loss of their homes, livelihoods, and sense of security. For children, the disruption of school and daily life has only deepened the emotional toll of displacement.

The visit aimed not only to provide immediate relief, but also to restore hope for families facing unimaginable loss—offering reassurance, dignity, and a reminder that even in the darkest moments, compassion and care endure.

The Need for International Support

Salesians across Cambodia are mobilizing in an effort to provide relief amid the crisis, growing displacement, and urgent humanitarian need.

Salesian communities across Phnom Penh, Kep, Sihanoukville, Battambang, and Poipet have begun mobilizing resources to raise funds for displaced students and their families, working to deliver food, shelter, and other essential aid. At the same time, local Salesian institutions are putting contingency plans in place to support students whose education has been disrupted—helping ensure continued access to meals, transportation, and pastoral care during these challenging times.

Speaking from the front lines, a Salesian missionary highlighted the critical needs of displaced communities, emphasizing the urgent need for global support: “Don Bosco Cambodia is appealing to the international community, partner organizations and benefactors to assist families of displaced students—especially those now living in temporary camps or without stable housing. Support is urgently needed for food, shelter, transportation, school materials and psychosocial assistance.”

The Salesian missionary added, “The Salesian community also renews its call for peace, urging all parties to prioritize the protection of civilians, especially children, and to pursue dialogue to end the violence. Don Bosco Cambodia emphasizes that education, safety and human dignity must remain above conflict.”

For the families, each day brings uncertainty, instability, and the struggle to rebuild what has been lost. For the Salesians the work has only just begun.

2 Corinthians 1:3-4

While so many children and families around the world struggle to make it through each day, many of our loyal donors are facing their own financial challenges and are unable to give what they normally would. As a result, funding for our lifesaving work is at a critical shortfall. I fear some of our mission works may be at risk.

If you can find it in your heart and have the means to give a little extra right now, we urge you to support our

Your help right now will ensure that we can continue to serve those who rely on us each day for food, clothing, shelter, medicine and the chance to escape poverty through education.

This is a very challenging time for us at Salesian Missions. We desperately need your financial support... and we also need your prayers to help us through this difficult time. We want to pray for your needs and intentions, too. Please list your prayer requests below and return them to us.

May God bless your for caring,

Notes From The Field

A Salesian Lay Missioner Experience

LAY MISSIONER: AMBROISE CURUTCHAGUE

MISSION ASSIGNMENT: LUFUBU, ZAMBIA

In Lufubu, only the strong survive.

Or so it is said.

In the far northwest of Zambia is a small valley of the Luapula River. People here have lived the same way for generations—hand to mouth, farming just enough for themselves to eat, scraping together just enough to build a house—four mud-brick walls and a thatch roof.

At the end of this valley sits the Salesian mission site—the one dirt road in the village leading right to the door of the church. It stops there as if in awe of the edifice, as if it were the terminus of all things. Sitting on the church steps on a Sunday, one might see straight across Lufubu—a river of living color streaming towards the Lord's house: people in their finest blues, reds, greens, bearing gifts in their hands for the King of Kings.

Salesian missionaries were here first; they built the church in the 1920s.

They built the main house, too—farm-style, one hallway opening into many rooms, a chapel, a veranda where one might watch the sunset. The school and the oratory came next, built on lands gifted by the local Chief.

Everything is now crumbling. Bats chitter above the classrooms and the pews.

A young boy approached the gates of the oratory one day as Father Cao and I were watching the children. He addressed us in perfect English. We were taken aback. We asked him how he had learned.

“English is my first language,” he said. “I’m an orphan. I was raised in the Salesian orphanage in Kazembe. I learned English from the volunteers.”

It was the eve of the feast of Don Bosco. The boy—whose name was Ephraim—had come from Kazembe to join in the festivities. The three of us stood together while the oratory bustled with life.

“Young man,” Father Cao began. “What grade are you in?”

“Grade five,” Ephraim said. “But I’m fifteen years old.”

“What’s the matter? You stopped school?”

“Yes. My brother stopped, so I stopped as well. But then I realized that school is very important, so I returned. I want to get an education so that I can be successful.”

“Good boy,” Father said.

They continued talking, laughing and smiling — Ephraim, orphaned from infancy and a stranger in his native place; and Father Cao, a kind man worn thin by the yoke of responsibility.

A week before, a boy named Peter had shown up at the oratory with a nail in his head. Or rather, the gaping hole where a nail had just been.

Nobody knew what to do about it. His parents were in the field, and, in any case, you had to be careful with these things. If we tried to help, and things went badly, we could be accused of witchcraft.

Nate, my fellow lay missionary, put his foot down. We were taking him to the clinic, and that was that. If someone wanted to accuse him of witchcraft, that was fine with him.

A crowd of children came with us. Peter walked stoically in the middle—Nate at his side. He held his hand the whole way, then didn't let go while the medic sutured Peter's forehead without anesthesia. Peter didn't even make a sound.

Peter kept coming back to the oratory after that, though he hadn't been a regular before. The hole in his head is all healed up.

In Lufubu, the strong survive—but at Don Bosco, the weak are carried. Around here, an orphan might become a son—a wounded child, a brother. The law of the land becomes a law of love. Don Bosco's charism lives—even in the midst of despair.

God bless.

SALESIANS IN THE U.S. AND CANADA

In 1897 the first Salesian missionaries (Priests & Brothers) settled in California. Salesian Sisters soon followed, arriving in New Jersey in 1908. Being a missionary in the U.S. at the time was difficult and challenging – but the good works progressed. Today over 450 professed Salesian Priests, Brothers and Sisters are present in the United States and Canada. Salesian Provinces based in Haledon NJ, New Rochelle NY, San Antonio TX and San Francisco CA serve thousands of young and poor throughout both countries. Their ministries encompass day care centers, elementary and high schools, formation houses, religious education centers, parishes, summer camps, development offices and youth centers. Thankfully, the spirit and joy of Don Bosco is still alive today in the U.S. and Canada!

Making an Impact Across the U.S.A.

You are already familiar with the lifesaving work the Salesians carry out every day in more than 130 countries around the world. But our mission is not limited to overseas efforts—it is also transforming lives here at home, as our missionaries across the United States mobilize daily to support American youth.

These efforts take shape across the country through a variety of programs including schools, youth centers, and camps. Each program plays a crucial role in supporting young people who would otherwise be underserved and left without the resources they need to succeed.

At a time when many youth in America are facing increasing challenges including economic uncertainty, lack of access to quality education, rising mental health concerns, and a shortage of consistent mentorship, these programs provide stability, guidance, and opportunity.

Schools

Salesian-run schools provide youth in America with the same life-changing education opportunities that they deliver to kids around the world. Access to quality education is one of the most important factors in determining a young person's long-term opportunities and life outcomes.

Don Bosco Cristo Rey High School in Maryland serves students with limited financial means—partnering with more than 300 local companies and organizations to allow students to work one day per week to fund their own tuition. This not only allows them to have immediate access to better education, but also provides them with valuable work experience for their futures.

In California, the Don Bosco Technical Institute offers students a STEM-focused curriculum where they complete extensive integrated coursework in one of five science and engineering fields. The school not only prepares students to have successful careers in an advanced, modern world—it also equips them to be good stewards of our planet as they do so. Bosco Tech's green technology course teaches students to seek alternative, environmentally-conscious solutions to everyday problems.

One remarkable example of the school's influence is student Jacob Lovi who was recently honored for an innovative idea he had while interning at Boeing. Lovi's contribution is projected to enhance their company's satellite production program in a significant way.

Youth Centers and Community Programs

Across the United States, many young people face a critical gap outside of the classroom—hours without structure, supervision, or access to positive influences. Youth centers and community programs play a vital role in filling that gap. They provide safe, consistent environments where young people can stay engaged, build relationships, and continue developing beyond the school day. These programs are especially important in communities where resources may be limited, offering mentorship, stability, and opportunities that might not otherwise be available.

Salesian Boys & Girls Clubs are one example of how this critical work is carried out every day in communities that need it most. These clubs not only provide students with an inclusive community; they cultivate an environment where young people from all backgrounds can thrive and grow.

Salesian Boys & Girls Club of East Boston serves over 3,000 students every year with over 20 programs that help shape them into productive, caring, and responsible citizens.

The Salesian Boys & Girls Club of San Francisco has supported youth for over 100 years. With a dedication to deliver quality care at an affordable cost, they have fostered a community that embodies empathy, kindness, and love. In its 2024-2025 fiscal year, the club made its largest scholarship contribution in its history, providing financial need scholarships to 11 College students, 23 High School students and 23 K-8 students.

These clubs understand that a child's opportunities should not be limited to their family's financial situation—creating spaces for children to grow as individuals and transform their lives.

Salesian Family Youth Center in Los Angeles and Don Bosco Community Center in Port Chester, New York embody these same principles to support families and provide opportunities to children. Inspired by the spirit of St. John Bosco, these centers are not only a place of fun and respite for the families, but also a cornerstone of support within their communities.

Camps

At Salesian camps, young people are given the opportunity to experience something different: time away from their daily environments where they can focus on growth, relationships, and discovery. These camps offer safe spaces where youth can develop confidence, independence, and a stronger sense of community.

Camp Echo Bay in New Rochelle, New York gives children ages four through thirteen a nurturing environment to grow into their own—organizing activities that help them explore and develop their unique strengths and talents. For over 80 years, the camp has operated the Don Bosco way: through joy, faith, and meaningful connection.

At Camp Savio in Bellflower, California, young people are not only benefiting from the camp—they're also helping to lead it. The camp operates collaboratively with youth members, giving them the opportunity to help plan its programs.

Camp St. Francis in Aptos, CA, provides boys ages 7 to 13 with a meaningful summer experience in a supportive Catholic environment. Built on the educational principles of St. John Bosco, the camp is intentionally structured as a home, playground, school, and church—helping campers grow in both life and faith while developing strong friendships.

Whether it's through schools, community centers, camps, or other programs being led by Salesians, each reflects a shared commitment to supporting young people in America. Through meaningful experiences and strong community, these programs provide the support and opportunities young people need to grow and succeed. While the settings may differ, the outcome is the same—youth who leave more confident, connected, and better prepared for the future.

EMPOWERING YOUNG WOMEN IN RWANDA

In Rwanda, as in many countries, women have been prevented from pursuing careers traditionally dominated by men. As a result, women have had greater difficulty finding gainful employment that enables them to contribute financially to their impoverished families. In a country where nearly 39% of the population lives in poverty, access to stable employment can be life changing.

That is why the Salesians, backed by your generosity, are opening new paths to financial independence for women and their families. Through a four-year initiative called Gender Matters for Green TVET (GMG TVET) at two Salesian institutions, Don Bosco Gatenga and Don Bosco Muhazi, young women are gaining practical skills that can provide long-term economic security.

The training program enables girls to become proficient in construction, electricity, plumbing and other trades. In addition, Don Bosco Muhazi offers young women – including many single mothers – courses in agriculture and livestock farming so they can better feed themselves and their children.

Approximately 80% of the women enrolled in the agricultural training program have moved onto entrepreneurship initiatives.

These programs equip participants with tools and livestock to start their own farms and connect them with financial institutions that can help them manage and grow their businesses.

The impact of these programs has far exceeded expectations. When GMG TVET began during the 2022–2023 school year, only 60 girls were enrolled at Don Bosco Gatenga. By 2024–2025, enrollment had risen to 209 females – 50 more than the goal – demonstrating both the growing interest among young women and the increasing acceptance of women in technical careers.

The increase was stimulated by the construction of a new dorm specifically for girls. The residence includes modern sanitary facilities and private rooms, giving students a comfortable place to live, study and rest after classes.

The success of the initiative is also rooted in the support systems offered to the girls. Participants receive counseling services to help address trauma, stress and personal challenges. Financial assistance has also been provided to many students, making it possible for them to continue their education and training.

Strong partnerships with local professionals and businesses further strengthen the program. Through internships and hands-on experience, students are able to apply what they learn in real-world settings while building valuable professional connections. In many cases, these internships have led directly to employment opportunities.

Success in School Equals Better Nutrition

At the Don Bosco Gumbo Camp on the outskirts of Juba, South Sudan, desperate mothers live in constant worry about the safety and well-being of their vulnerable children. They are among the more than 5,000 people who have been internally displaced due to an ongoing civil war. The humanitarian crisis has caused severe food shortages, leaving families wondering where they will find their next meal.

Thankfully, the Salesians have responded in a significant way. In partnership with Rise Against Hunger, another trusted humanitarian organization, the refugees of Gumbo were provided with a major shipment of provisions including rice, soy, vegetables and vitamins. The delivery has also benefitted 2,000 students at Don Bosco Schools by enabling the school to serve an extra meal per day per child.

James, a student at the Don Bosco Gumbo Primary School, is one of the recipients of the additional meal. He states that he feels an immediate shift in his ability to engage with his schooling. “Since we have been having these meals, I feel stronger and don’t get tired very fast. These meals are my favorite part of my day. I get to eat with my friends and then play afterwards.” James has also seen an upswing in his grades.

While James has stated how happy the extra meals have made him, he has also noticed a difference within the school in general. He has observed that the entire school body is energized in its ability to concentrate, and that class attendance has greatly improved.

James is deeply grateful for the support he is receiving and plans to help others someday just as he has been helped by the meal program. He also aspires to become a doctor if he continues to do well in school.

In addition to the nutritional aid provided in Gumbo, the feeding program also extended to highly vulnerable populations in other communities. In Tonj, 180 people suffering from leprosy received extra meals, and a group of displaced refugees in Wau were fed from the nutritious food as well.

Through life-changing programs like this, the Salesians ensure that the most vulnerable of society are given respect and dignity as their bodies and spirits are fueled.

Every $1=$14

Several organizations have partnered with Salesian Missions because they have tons (literally!) of essential items that they want to donate free of charge... but we need your help so we can deliver them into the hands of poor children and families who need them the most.

YOU CAN HELP MAKE THIS HAPPEN!

We can pack a large container – about the size of a tractor-trailer truck – with $70,000 worth of donated food, medicine, clothing or school supplies... and the overseas shipping cost would be only $5,000.

Simply put, every $1 you give enables us to ship $14 worth of life-changing – and life-saving – supplies!

What's more, your generosity will be a testament to the Loaves and Fishes miracle when Jesus multiplied seven loaves of bread and a few small fish into enough food to feed four thousand people! So much is at stake. Thank you for whatever you can give today!

ARGENTINA: Better Tools Equal Better Opportunities

In southern Argentina, your generosity is enabling students to transition more quickly into employment after graduation. Don Bosco Villa Itati, San Juan Bosco Vocational Training Center, and the Avellaneda Vocational Training Center have all received funding to upgrade their equipment.

Students now learn with the same quality tools professionals use in their trades. This hands-on experience helps students build confidence, become proficient in their chosen fields and improve their chances of being hired after completing their classes. The training centers also connect students with internships while they are still in school. For many, an internship is the first step toward workplace exposure and future employment.

Pablo Rodriguez is one of the students benefiting from the new tools. He's now better equipped to pursue his dream of becoming an auto mechanic, a career that will offer stable employment and financial independence.

ECUADOR: Medical Care for Forgotten Communities

For the remote Achuar community of Pumpuntu, access to adequate medical care is limited. Common illnesses largely go untreated and the resulting effects can be devastating. Many people suffer – and die – needlessly.

The dire circumstances compelled our missionaries in Ecuador to organize a medical brigade to provide much-needed assistance. The team included 10 doctors from the University of Cuenca along with volunteers from other organizations.

In addition to visiting Pumpuntu, the team traveled to the indigenous communities of Karakam, Kurinua, Wasurak, and Patukmay. Volunteers were greeted with enthusiasm and warmth as they delivered medical care, donations, and messages of hope for youth and families.

Our Salesian missionaries also provide essential services throughout Ecuador to help underprivileged youth gain the skills they need to build better lives for themselves and their families. Poverty in Ecuador remains deeply unequal, with the poorest residents receiving only 5% of the country's income.

UKRAINE: Lifting the Spirits of Injured Soldiers

Young Ukrainian soldiers who come off the battlefield with amputations have found support among the Salesians, but not in a traditional way.

Two and a half years ago, Salesian missionaries in Lviv, Ukraine began a soccer team made up of young soldiers who had undergone limb amputations during the war. Today that team, Pokrova AMP, is the first championship team of the AMP soccer series which is now made up of over 300 soldiers and 15 AMP soccer centers around Ukraine.

Rooted in the Salesian tradition of working with the body and spirit, young soldiers are welcomed into Salesian centers where they become like family to each other. They work together as they learn to cope with the manifestations of their military service. The AMP soccer teams provide the youth an alternative to focusing on their injuries, and stress the positive spirit of sports, the drive to persevere, and the importance of working as a team.

Count Your Blessings - Grant a Wish!

The Salesians work in over 130 countries. Just imagine, then, how many of our missionaries write to tell us of their hopes and dreams, trials and successes. Maybe, as you count your blessings, you could grant a wish. God bless you!

Fr. Mike

WISHES OF THE MONTH

- Provide hope and support to displaced families. Our Salesian missionaries are responding to the humanitarian crisis in Cambodia where an estimated 500,000 people have been forced to abandon their homes and all their belongings. Help us ensure that these families receive the life-saving essentials they desperately need. (See p. 2).
- Empower women to escape poverty. Two Salesian training schools in Rwanda are opening doors for women in typically male dominated trades such as construction, electrical, and plumbing. Will you help us expand this investment so more impoverished women can gain the skills to support themselves and their families? (See p. 18).
- Feed those who need nourishment. Thousands of hungry children at Salesian-run schools throughout South Sudan are getting an extra healthy meal each day thanks to our partnership with Rise Against Hunger. Your continued generosity will help ensure hungry kids get the nutrition they need to focus on their studies and stay healthy. (See p. 22).
- Deliver life-saving medical care for a forgotten community. Sick children and adults in remote Ecuadorian villages are no longer dying needlessly from common illnesses because our Salesian missionaries have organized a medical brigade to deliver critical care. With you by our side, we can ensure no child will ever have to succumb to a treatable condition. (See p. 26).

Your Love in Action!

These youngsters are proudly wearing their "Hope Bracelets" - a cherished gift that you helped give them.

Thanks to so many of you who responded so generously to our Easter Cards Appeal... poor children in our missions received a "Hope Bracelet" to wear in appreciation of you - and your love for them.

What joy it is to see the smiles on these children's faces and to realize how such a simple gesture can bring so much happiness.

We will continue to distribute "Hope Bracelets" to even more of our mission kids. In this way, in a true sense, you are there with them, always reminding them of your goodness and compassion.
